MISCELLANEOUS.

NEW BREWERY.

The Best Beer in Town.

ARTHUR RECHENMACHER, Brewer, has removed from his place, near the corner of Main and Second streets, to his large saloon on Gila street, foot of Second, where he will be pleased to see his old friends and customers. This saloon is the largest best ventilated in the city.
Beer is A No. 1, and the ices, liquors and cigars cannot be surpassed. sep28 3m

L. JONES beg leave to announce to his friends and other patrons that he has again resumed business. His Saloon is now supplied with the best of ices, liquors and cigars.

Mr. Jones also wishes to inform public that he has still the mill, where hay and grain of quality is kept on hand for accommodation of teamsters and others. sep27 3m C. L. JONES.

Ground Burning Up.

One of the strangest of phenomena of the time is reported to us from the site of old Fort Pillow, sixty miles above this city. It is no more or less than that the bluff bank of the river, which rises fifty or sixty feet above the water level, is on fire, and for the past several weeks has been steadily burning like a volcano for a distance of several hundred yards along the east side of the river on a line ten or twelve feet above the water level. At night a lurid flame or blaze of gas rises from the side of the bluff to a height of two or three feet, which then spreads into smoke and passes on over the summit of the hill, distributing itself with the atmosphere and floating away skyward. The steamer Calisto, on her last trip, passed by the place in broad daylight and at a time when a light wind blew from the shore, carrying the smoke toward the Arkansas shore and covering the river with a thick haze almost like fog.
What strange combustible formation composes the river bluff of the old fort, or what first set it on fire, to burn after the fashion described, is one of the most miraculous events of the times, and puzzles the people of the vicinity a little. --Memphis Dispatch.

A MICHIGAN PARLER--The Detroit Free Press Police people generally to come hither, as follows: "If your wife has eloped, come to Detroit to find her. If your husband has scented with the hired girl or your neighbor's wife, come here first of all. If your daughter has fled or eloped to get married, strike for Detroit.
All these people make right for this point, or everybody thinks they do. The chief of the police, the newspapers and business men, are almost daily in receipt of letters or telegrams to the effect that elopers are making for Detroit and should be caught. Women come here to look for runaway husbands, and husbands arrive here to inquire for runaway wives. Half of the detective business consists in hunting up such parties and sending them to their homes."
